HISTORY

This is a good example of a Georgian hob grate being produced in the 1780's or 1790's. This format with wide hobs enabled the cooking and warming of food and water by the fire. The influence of Robert Adam can be seen in the relief-cast ornament - his brother John was both a share-holder and designer for the Carron foundry in Falkirk. Carron and Coalbrookdale were competitors at the time - with little design protection they readily copied each other's patterns.
