AN ENGLISH OAK PANELLED ROOM

Jacobean in format, and much of it possibly in age, much of the carved elements likely Victorian; removed from a Buckinghamshire farmhouse, in four principle sections, each a large panel of repeating moulded recessed rectangular panels - either 16 or 20 rectangles on each large section, topped by a running frieze carved in relief with grotesque beasts, fruiting apple branches, a Green Man and wyverns, one panel bears an incised date of 1686 (probably a later embellishment) and all surmounted with a dentil cornice. Comes with three single doors which measure (LtoR as pictured) 190cm h x 88cm w, 188cm h x 75cm w, 191cm h x 87cm w - two blind to the reverse, the other with raised and fielded panels. Also included: further pilasters, frieze carvings and spare panels.

DIMENSIONS: 223cm (87^{3/4}") High, 562cm (221^{1/4}") Wide, 562cm (221^{1/4}") The Run, (height without frieze = 194cm, frieze and cornice 35cm h, each rectangular panel approx 40cm h x 30cm w,
