HISTORY

The pediment crowned an enormous stone doorcase that comprised the Queen Victoria Street main entrance to "Mansion House Buildings" (otherwise known as "No1. Poultry" or "The Mappin & Webb Building"). This Venetian Gothic building on a prime site facing The Mansion House, The Royal Exchange and The Bank of England was built in 1870 by J&J Belcher.

Its loss is much lamented - a bitter feud was waged by The Victorian Society and SAVE Britain's heritage to save it from demolition-wrecking ball ... Read the full story here.
