

LASSCO

www.lassco.co.uk

THREE PIGEONS

LASSCO Three Pigeons
Milton Common,
Oxfordshire OX9 2JN
+44 (0)1844 277188
3pigeons@lassco.co.uk

BRUNSWICK HOUSE

30 Wandsworth Road,
London SW8 2LG
+44 (0) 20 7394 2100
brunswick@lassco.co.uk

PIPES IN A JAR: A COLLECTION OF OLD ENGLISH CLAY PIPES

20 hand-made decorative pipes, 18th and 19th Century, each with either a decorated bowl, or maker's stamp to the stem, or both, mostly with broken stems, plus two bowls and 15 stems, many with maker's marks; all in an early 20th Century glass Forsters Jar,

DIMENSIONS: 22cm (8^{3/4}") High, 10cm (4") Wide, 10cm (4") Deep, the jar

PRICE: £100

STOCK CODE: 47072

HISTORY

Clay pipes were made to be ephemeral and consumable: millions were made. They invariably broke and would be used in their shortened form until they were known as “nose-burners” and would be thrown away – which explains why the Thames foreshore in central London is littered with many thousands of clay pipes – the stem and the bowl – to be found centuries later by Mudlarks between the tides. This collection has not originated from the Thames mud.

There are some examples here from the 18th Century, possibly earlier. There are numerous inventive designs: humorous portrait heads, bird-claw-feet, footballers. Both the maker’s themselves and the Inns and Tobacconists that supplied the pipes would adopt their own peculiar designs encouraging brand loyalty.