HISTORY

In November 1793 during the French Revolution, Pierre André Latreille was imprisoned under threat of execution. When the prison's doctor inspected the prisoners, he found Latreille scrutinising a beetle on the dungeon floor. Latreille impressed the doctor by explaining that it was a rare insect having identified it as Necrobia ruficollis. The physician sent the insect to a 15-year-old local naturalist, Jean Baptiste Bory de Saint-Vincent. who knew Latreille's work, and managed to obtain his release. Latreille and Bory de Saint-Vincent remained life-long friends.
